

Contributors

Jessica A. Albrecht

Jessica Albrecht is a teaching fellow and a research fellow at the Department of the Study of Religion in the faculty of Theology at the University of Heidelberg. After completing an MSc in Gender History at the University of Glasgow in 2018, she is currently finishing an M.A. in Communications, Literature and Media in Modern South Asian Languages, and will start her PhD in the Study of Religion on theosophical feminists and Buddhist and Hindu girls education in colonial Ceylon in the fall of 2020.

(tr227@uni-heidelberg.de)

Ross Cameron

Ross Cameron is a first year AHRC sponsored PhD researcher based at the School of Modern Languages and Cultures, University of Glasgow, and the Humanities and Social Sciences Graduate School, University of Strathclyde. His primary area of research is Anglo-American women's travel to the Balkans between the turn of the twentieth century and World War Two. Broader interests also include nineteenth and twentieth century travel literature, the culture of travel and tourism, technologies of motion and visual culture.

Sophie Fauerbach

Sophie Fauerbach has been studying Religious Studies with a minor in History at the University of Heidelberg since 2018. Her main areas of interest are the methods and theories of religious studies as cultural studies as well as comparative religious studies and the history of the discipline. She also deals with the legitimation of religious rule, esotericism and the transformation of Buddhist ideas and practices.

Hella de Haas

Hella de Haas is studying for her Master's degree in Communication Science at the Westphalian Wilhelms University of Münster. Prior to this, she completed her Bachelor's degree in Communication and Media Science with a minor in German philology at the University of Bremen. Her interest in gender issues in communication science was evident at an early stage, which led her to deal with the media portrayal of female politicians on the basis of their gender in both a seminar paper and her bachelor's thesis.

(Contact her regarding her surveys and data at: hella.dh@web.de)

Jovana Perovic

Born 1998 in Belgrade, Serbia, Jovana Perovic emigrated with 7 years to Germany. She began studying Psychology at the University of Ulm, but changed her initial path in order to study Theology and Religious Studies at the University of Heidelberg, where she started her undergraduate degree in April of 2019. Since September of 2019 she is enrolled in a double degree program at the FernUniversität Hagen in Cultural Studies with an emphasis on philosophy. She takes an interest in christian and non-christian encounters, exchanges and interactions in various cultural and historical backgrounds.

Christoph Wilhelm

Christoph Wilhelm B.A. is currently studying for a Master's degree in Educational Science at the University of Tübingen. His areas of interest are: Educational climbers, the epistemological value of novels, Pierre Bourdieu, and social inequalities.

(Christoph.wilhelm@student.uni-tuebingen.de)